Details

Mater Dei School is located at Narellan, near Camden. It is a special school, with a residential programme, that was established by the Sisters of the Good Samaritan in 1957. It was previously the Mater Dei Orphanage. Records of children who have attended Mater Dei School since 1957 are held at the school.

In 2011 Mater Dei offered a range of services to support babies, children and young people with disabilities and developmental delays, including early intervention therapy, education and residential programmes.

The Mater Dei school programme supports up to 140 students from K-12 and enables them to achieve a school certificate, or higher school certificate in life skills.
