

Presbyterian Social Services

1988 –

Other Names: • Jericho Road

URL: <https://jerichoroad.org.au/>

Details

Presbyterian Social Services Child and Family Programme auspiced three medium to long term youth accommodation programs in Sydney. These were Kyle Williams Home at 52 Waratah Street, Blakehurst, New Anchor home at 79 Sutherland Road, Jannali, and Cornerstone at 20 Wrentmore Street, Fairfield.

By 2010, all youth accommodation services had closed.

By the mid 2010s, Presbyterian Social Services was also known as Jericho Road.

Previously the Presbyterian Church auspiced a number of homes and programs which were absorbed into the Uniting Church in 1977. This included Burnside Homes for Children. Additionally, the Presbyterian Adoption Agency, which had also arranged many adoption services through the Queen Victoria Hospital at Annandale and the Pittwood Homes at Ashfield was devolved, and all files and relevant records regarding adoptions were transferred to the Department of Community Services.

More info

Related Entries

Ran

- Kyle Williams Home \(1985 - 2003\)
- New Anchor \(c. 1990 - c. 1999\)
- Cornerstone \(1990s - 2010\)

Related Organisations

- Presbyterian Church of Australia \(1901 - current\)
The Presbyterian Church of Australia runs the Presbyterian Social Services Department and its Child and Family Program.

Records

Records held by this organisation

- Records held by Presbyterian Social Services \(1988 - current\)

Records held by other organisations

- Records relating to Adoption \(1900? - current\)
-

You can view this page online by visiting <https://findconnect.efront.digital/entity/presbyterian-social-services-child-and-family-program/>