Details

The records in this collection relate to services and out-of-home-care provided by Boys Town Engadine. The records are dated from 1940 onwards and vary in detail. These records are held by Boys Town in a secure archive room.

Access Conditions

People wishing to access records that may contain personal information about them from Boystown need to make a request in writing and provide photographic (For example a drivers licence) or two other forms of identification (for example a bank statement, birth certificate or health care card). Boys Town encourages people to use their Request to Information Application Form to make such requests. According to the Boys Town Privacy Policy requests by people not 'genuinely entitled to the information under legislation' or requests where 'giving access would compromise the privacy or safety of any individual' may be turned down. Boys Town may allow people to amend their records or to attach a statement to their records.

Records

According to Connecting Kin: Guide to Records published in 1998 by the New South Wales Department of Community Services by page 136 – 137 the records in this archival collection 'contain information about residents of Boys' Town, Engadine. The information in the early records is very basic: name, date of birth and address. Some records contain referral information. The more recent records, dating from the 1970s, for example, have more information in the form of reports, referrals, etc. Quantity: 32 boxes of cards and files. Other than the information contained in an individual file, there are some related records such as photo albums for more recent years. This additional information is limited, and the albums are indexed or filed. These albums are also kept at Boys' Town's offices at Engadine.'
