

Rainbow Lodge

1970 – c. 1979

Details

Rainbow Lodge was a children's home at Hazelbrook operated by the Handicapped Children's Centre of New South Wales from 1970. The building, located on the Great Western Highway, had previously been Haddon Hall.

Rainbow Lodge was in the former Haddon Hall buildings. These had been owned by Japanese businessman and vice-consul Toransuki Kitamura, who had bought them and built the bungalow 'Yama' before his death in 1930. The Sydney City Mission bought them and ran 'Haddon Hall' on the site until 1967.

Rainbow Lodge was described as a children's home in a 1979 Commonwealth Government report called Why are they in children's homes: report of the ACOSS children's home intake survey.

Gallery

Rainbow Lodge and Grounds (I)

Description: This image shows the outside of the building.

Rainbow Lodge and grounds (II)

Description: This image shows the outside of the building.

More info

Related Entries

Related Organisations

- Haddon Hall \(1950 - 1967\)

Rainbow Lodge used the buildings that had been Haddon Hall.