

South Australian Youth Training Centre

1979 – 1993

Other Names: • SAYTC

Details

The South Australian Youth Training Centre, SAYTC, was the new name given to McNally Training Centre in 1979. It operated in Magill as a government secure care facility for up to 90 youths aged between the ages of 15 and 18. In 1993, the name of the centre changed to the Magill Training Centre.

In 1979, as part of a restructuring of the institutional care and programs for young offenders, the government changed the name of McNally Training Centre to the South Australian Youth Training Centre (SAYTC). It operated on the same site at Glen Stuart Road, Magill, and was a secure care facility for up to 90 boys aged between 15 and 18.

SAYTC was divided into five units. Three units provided short-term accommodation for boys who had been arrested for an offence, were on remand or had been placed at the Centre for assessment. Two further units were for boys who had been committed by the courts to undergo training. These boys were provided with individual 'therapeutic' training. All boys undertook other courses including regular and special schooling and training in the trade workshop.

Although the aim of the Centre was to provide individualised programs and training for each boy, records accessed as part of the 2004-2008 Children in State Care Commission of Inquiry revealed a strong focus on punishment. Boys deemed to require discipline were either given work programs or could be placed in isolation for up to eight hours.

During this era, greater emphasis was placed on using community initiatives rather than committing young offenders to long term secure care. For this reason, SAYTC also continued to operate a non-secure community based unit at Glandore known as the Glandore Unit. This Unit, which had opened in 1975, provided accommodation for boys released from the Centre and assisted them to find work and gradually move back into the community.

In 1985, due to a decrease in numbers of boys committed to the Centre, one of the five units was closed. From that year the Centre operated with two units for assessment for boys on remand and the other two for young offenders who were being detained for between 2 and 24 months. The average number of boys in the centre in the late 1980s was 43. During 1986-87, number dropped further and another unit was closed, leaving 3 operating, one for short term assessment and two for long term detention.

During 1988-90, changes were made to both the interior and exterior of the building to 'reduce the risk of self-damaging behaviour and to improve the quality of living conditions'. These changes were made in response to the suicide of an Aboriginal boy at the Centre and as a result of the findings of the interim report of the Royal Commission into Aboriginal Deaths in Custody (1988).

During the 1990s numbers of boys serving long term sentences in the Centre increased. This led to the establishment of a new purpose-built facility at Cavan in 1993. In that same year The South Australian Youth Training Centre was renamed the Magill Training Centre. Older boys were moved to the Cavan Training Centre while younger ones remained at Magill. A separate facility was created on the site for young women who had previously been held at the South Australian Youth Remand and Assessment Centre.

Gallery

McNally Training Centre

Description: This is a copy of a picture of McNally Training Centre that appeared in the 1969 Annual Report of the Department of Social Welfare, with the caption: 'The main entrance with the administration block in the centre and the concert hall on the right'.

More info

Chronology

- McNally Training Centre (1967 - 1979)
 - South Australian Youth Training Centre (1979 – 1993)
 - Magill Training Centre (1993 - 2012)

Related Entries

Run by

- Department for Community Welfare, South Australian Government \(1972 - 1990\)
Date: 1979 - 1990
- Department for Family and Community Services, South Australian Government \(1990 - 1998\)
Date: 1990 - 1993

Related Organisations

- Glandore Unit \(1975 - 1980\)
Glandore Unit operated as a non-secure community unit for boys released from the South Australian Youth Training Centre
- Cavan Training Centre \(1993 - 2012\)
Cavan Training Centre accommodated some young men previously held at the South Australian Youth Training Centre.
Date: 1993 -

Resources

- Walsh, Dave, Life in Magill Youth Training Centre, Weekend Notes, 18 April 2014

Records

For more information and to access your records, follow the links below:

Records held by other organisations

- Records of the Social Welfare Department and predecessors \(1849 - c. 1987\)
- Records of the South Australian Youth Training Centre \(1940 - 1999\)

- Personal disposition advice forms - Magill Training Centre \(1940 - 1996\)

The series Personal disposition advice forms - Magill Training Centre, held by State Records of SA, contains some records relating to the South Australian Youth Training Centre

You can view this page online by visiting <https://findconnect.efront.digital/entity/south-australian-youth-training-centre/>