

Christian Brethren in Tasmania

1869 –

Other Names: • Plymouth Brethren

Details

The Christian Brethren first came to Tasmania in 1869. They are an evangelical Protestant church with no ordained ministers and a strong lay involvement in their activities. The Brethren ran Glenhaven Children's Home in Ulverstone and Hillcrest Children's Home in Hobart.

By the end of the 1870s the Christian Brethren were well established in most centres of the colony, especially the north-west coast.

The Brethren believe that the Bible is the highest religious authority so they do not have ordained ministers. Each assembly is independent of the others in religious matters but they maintain a close association. Baptism is by immersion. Members of the Brethren take weekly communion.

In Tasmania, most Brethren are 'open', that is, they do not belong to the 'exclusive' Brethren who avoid contact with outsiders to the religion. The 'open' Brethren are evangelists and carry-out community work, including overseas missions.

Gallery

After-church scene at the Murray Street chapel, Hobart, in 1967

More info

Related Entries

Ran

- Glenhaven Children's Home \(1959 - 1988?\)
- Hillcrest Children's Home \(1966 - 1984\)
- Glendel Children's Home \(1970? - c. 1992\)

Related Organisations

- Havenview Children's Home \(1970? - 1989?\)

The Christian Brthren ran Glenview Children's Home which ran Havenview Children's Home.

Resources

- Christian Brethren. Tasmania, Assembly Challenge, 1961 - 1995
-

You can view this page online by visiting <https://findconnect.efront.digital/entity/christian-brethren/>