

Protector of Aborigines, Northern Territory, South Australian Government

1864 – 1910

Details

The Protector of Aborigines was the government officer responsible for overseeing contact and relationships with Aboriginal people in the Northern Territory. While the Northern Territory was under South Australian control, Protectors reported to the responsible minister of the South Australian Government through the Government Resident of the Northern Territory. At times the Medical Officer for the Northern Territory (previously called the Colonial Surgeon for the Northern Territory, or the Medical Officer, Palmerston) also acted as the Protector of Aborigines.

More info

Chronology

- Protector of Aborigines, Northern Territory, South Australian Government (1864 – 1910)
 - Chief Protector of Aborigines, Northern Territory, South Australian Government (1910)

You can view this page online by visiting <https://findconnect.efront.digital/entity/protector-of-aborigines-northern-territory/>